VOLUME 17, NUMBER 1

SPRING 2008

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dreams and Visions

Another political season is bringing contrasting visions for the future of our country. All three major candidates for President have shared their dreams with us, stirring our hopes for a more peaceful world, a stronger economy, preservation of the global environment, healing of racial and political divisions. One of the great gifts of democracy is the hopefulness of visionary thinking that emerges in each election cycle.

Dreams of a better future are an unmistakable sign of health. Depression dampens dreams, trapping thoughts in cynical despair. But when a struggling individual can take positive steps toward the glimpse of a new future, there is hope for healing. When couples can see beyond their bitter conflict, the possibility of a new marriage is born. And when a society puts aside the negativity of how awful things are, a new and more positive era may emerge. Green shoots of new life appear out of death in just such ways.

The Samaritan Counseling Center is doing some visionary thinking of our own these days. Having doubled in size and service to the community twice in the past five years, we are asking ourselves what growth and new service we may be called to offer in the years ahead. Samaritan will celebrate its 25th anniversary in 2012, and our board and staff are working now to cast a vision of our future in central New Mexico. One thing is clear. As the mental health care system of our state continues to crumble, we must be even more diligent in continuing to offer healing and hope to children and couples and families who struggle with the burden of mental and emotional and relational and spiritual malaise.

Dreams do not become reality without hard work. When this election season is over in the Fall, Americans must join hands to create the better world we have glimpsed in the oratory of the months now unfolding. Likewise, we at Samaritan, board and staff and volunteers, are dedicating ourselves to the hard work of providing service and raising money to bring excellent, ethical, and accessible care to all who need our vital ministry. Our Campaign for Hope is making good progress in raising $2.2 million to sustain Samaritan's service into the future. Samaritan's board and staff are working hard daily to deliver healing care and fund our ongoing operation. We are thankful to all who help us in this important work, and we give particular thanks to the Author of all visions whose blessings we enjoy and whose guidance we seek to follow.

Spirit of Samaritan Campaign for Hope

phi•lan•thro•py

altruistic concern for human welfare and advancement, usually manifested by donations of money, property, or work to needy persons, and by generosity to other socially useful purposes

In October of 2007, Samaritan embarked on an ambitious campaign to increase our endowment by $2 million, to sustain the healing work we do here. Thanks to the generosity and support of cherished donors, staff and board members, we have received a total of $1,178,061.00 in pledges and cash gifts. We're over halfway to our goal!

SCCF Offers Mediation for Divorcing Couples

Mediation of divorces or separations will be offered by the Samaritan Center for Changing Families (SCCF) to clients who want to avoid the stress and dissension of litigation. Martha J. Kaser, JD LMSW, a therapist and experienced divorce mediator, will offer this service as an alternative to the 'traditional' method of litigated divorce or separation. The service is available to all couples who are ending their relationship, whether married or not, and wish to avoid the emotional and financial stress of litigation. Mediation is added to SCCF's successful Wise Parent program for parents who seek assistance with co-parenting after divorce or separation.

Mediation is based upon the premise that couples can work out the end of their formal relationship themselves, with the assistance of a neutral third party mediator. When children are involved, the mediation process helps parents structure their continuing relationship as co-parents of their children after the marriage ends. Mediators can help couples divide assets and debts, provide for the financial and parenting needs of their children, establish spousal support if required, and provide for dispute resolution should differences arise in the future.

The process involves non-adversarial meetings between the parents and the mediator where options for resolving each issue are discussed and the parties reach agreement on the outcome. All communications during the process are kept confidential. Some mediations resolve every issue; some do not. In any case, every issue settled at mediation is one less for resolution through the courts. Parties may have attorneys who attend the mediation with them. In other cases, the parties are representing themselves. The mediator is not acting as an attorney for either party, and does not offer legal representation.

At the conclusion of the mediation, a document reflecting the couple's agreement is prepared and signed. Forms approved by the Second Judicial District are available if the parties wish to prepare all of the documents they need to file the completed divorce with the court.

Mediation services are not therapy, and are not eligible for reimbursement by health insurance companies. Services will be billed on a sliding fee scale from $60.00 to $125.00 per person per hour.

Research on mediated versus litigated divorces concludes that the overall level of satisfaction, and compliance with a mediated agreement is higher than that resulting from a divorce or separation acquired through litigation. The Samaritan Center for Changing Families is pleased to offer this service to the families of Albuquerque.

Samaritan Receives Corporate Citizenship Award

The "stars" gathered at Rodey Theatre on UNM's campus on Tuesday, March 18, 2008 for the Greater Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce's Fourth Annual Corporate Citizenship Awards. Samaritan Counseling Center was one of the finalists in the non-profit category. These awards are presented to businesses and non-profit organizations that demonstrate their achievements through community involvement, environmental impact and economic viability.

After the three business winners were announced, the suspense built around the non-profit category, with Samaritan up against two very worthy non-profit candidates, Immanuel Lutheran School and Tree New Mexico. Randy Woodcock of United Way (last year's recipient in the non-profit category) opened the envelope and revealed Samaritan Counseling Center as the winner! Paul Hopkins accepted the beautiful award on behalf of Samaritan and basked in the glow of the crowd's adulation.

Spirit of Samaritan Campaign Update

The Spirit of Samaritan Campaign for Hope has brought in over $1.3 million in gifts and pledges as of June 30. Launched in September, 2007, the campaign aims to raise $2.2 million to expand and sustain Samaritan's ministry of healing in central New Mexico. Included in the goal is an intent to increase the Samaritan Counseling Center Foundation's assets from $1.1 million to $3 million by 2010. Earnings from the Foundation are used to help underwrite the cost of care provided to poor and uninsured clients served by Samaritan. Samaritan board members are talking with friends and supporters of the Samaritan Counseling Center, inviting others to consider three-year pledges to this special campaign, over and above annual campaign gifts to Samaritan's operation. Eleven other community backers have agreed to serve as members of the Campaign for Hope Team focusing on major gifts to the campaign.

Randy Travis Performs to Benefit Samaritan

PLANNING FOR FUTURE SERVICE

Recently the Samaritan Counseling Center has been updating its strategic plan to guide our growth and operation through our 25th year of service in 2012. Led by co-chairs Holly Traver of Wells Fargo Bank and Terry Horn of PNM, representing the Center board and the Foundation board respectively, the twelve member strategic plan committee of staff and board members has extended a vision and developed detailed plans for achieving that vision over the course of the next five years. The draft of the proposed plan will be reviewed by various Center stakeholders over the summer, with adoption by the Center's board expected in August. To review a copy of the Center's Strategic Plan, 2008 – 2012, visit Samaritan's website, www.samaritancc.com and click on strategic plan or the home page on the Board of Directors page.
